Expert on Shipping Declares End of War Will See European-Owned Vessels for Sale, Driven Out of Orient by New World-Power.

By JUDSON C. WELLIVER.

Japan is preparing a solution for America's problem of merchant shipping, in the opinion of Washington people who have been studying development of far eastern affairs lately.

This curious conclusion is reached, especially, by shipping men; and their analysis of the relation between the world war and the new Oriental question is calculated to give pause to Americans who can see no particular concern of this country in the European struggle.

Here is a quotation from a veteran of the mercantile marine business; a man who knows the ships and shipping, the business, the ports, and more than one man's share of the politics of the world:

NO NEED TO PASS SPECIAL LAWS.

"There's no need of passing special laws to establish Government ocean shipping lines, or any kind, at this time. It would be bad business and worse politics.

"Japan's annexation of China—for that is practically what has taken place, and it is the biggest result of the war in Europe, perhaps the biggest one that it is the biggest result of the war in Europe, perhaps the biggest one that will come—means that in the next few years Japan will absorb all the China trade away from the Germans and the British. It is the biggest trade of either country, and it is going to be taken over by Japan. There may be some need for manipulation of tariffs and administrative regulations, but all that will be managed easily enough by the Japanese diplomats. They have been working for years toward this end; the war in Europe opened the opportunity unexpectedly.

"When the Japanese are able to execute their plans, the China trade will go

"When the Japanese are able to execute their plans, the China trade will go into Japanese bottoms, which will be built to accommodate it; it will go by way of Japanese ports, and will be to a great extent in wares manufactured in Japan.

Many Ships Idle.

That change will leave a vast tonnage of European ships idle, and these ships will be available for American use at prices so much lower than present figures, based on war-time tolls, that we can hardly conceive what it will mean. No need to worry about ships to carry American trade five years from now. They will be flocking here from all quarters of the world."

The speaker frankly avowed that he did not look forward to the future in did not look forward to the future in the commercial east with much satisfaction. He knows China, Japan, India, and their commercial positions, and he expressed the opinion that "within a decade after this war ends, Japan, securely dominating China, will be the most powerful nation in the world. It will be able from the myriads of China to maintain an army of ten millions, if that he necessary: and it will organize to maintain an army of ten millions, if that be necessary; and it will organize China to a military and economic efficiency that will make it a huge figure in the world."

But the first striking effect or America, it was insisted, will be felt in the revolution of maritime shipping conditions. The Japanese are a great sea-faring race, with national aspirations to dominate the marine of the East as Britain has controlled that of the West. The war will give them their opportunity, for a great deal of Occidental shipping must be withdrawn by reason of war's extraordinary demands, and thus the Japanese will work their way in. Germs Can't Stay

"It is all well enough," proceeded this commentator, "to talk about the repeal or reorganization of the La Follette seamen's act at the coming session of Congress; but it will not be done. Why? Because, no matter what its merits as an economic measure, whether it is or an economic measure, whether it is one is not driving shipping away from American registry, the Eastland disaster in Chicago will serve to prevent any withdrawal from the safety provisions that constitute so important a part of the law. It is possible that the law might have been reformed somewhat by might have been reformed somewhat by the coming Congress, had not that horror in Chicago served to rivet attention again on the very problems of safety at sea that inspired the law. With that fearful affair fresh in the public mind, talk about making it possible to operate American ships more cheaply will get a poor hearing."

This view of the shipping situation, it may be said is entertained by a good may be said, is entertained by a good many people in Washington. The im-pression that the La Foliette law was a pression that the La Follette law was a mistake has been without doubt gaining ground, and there was in process of organization a strong movement to have it repealed or fundamentally modified. Today, the best advice that could be given to people anxious to secure such ends, is to keep very still for an indefinite time. Congress will meet in December, and very shortly will order its own inquiry fit the Eastland accident; an inquiry that will go into the whole matter of safety, inspection, and the like.

The men a willing witness to its wonderful who carried on the long campaign end-power to overcome blood troubles. You who carried on the long campaign ending in its passage, are equipping themselves with a store of data concerning store in the U.S., a significant fact as to its worth and its sterling repushould be repealed, and they have no idea of being defeated. The attack on their law will be met with an insistence that the state of the directions with the bottle do not its workings, and the claim that it that the act be made more rigorous fully cover your case.

HEADACHES

Thousands of men and women suffer from headaches every day, other thousands have headaches every week or every month, and still others have headaches occasionally, but not at regular intervals. The best doctor is often unable to find the cause of many of these headaches, and in most other cases, knowing the cause, he does not know what will remove it, so as to give a permanent cure. All he can do is to prescribe the usual pain relievers, which give temporary relief, but the headache returns as usual, and treatment is again necessary. If you suffer from headaches, no matter what their nature, take Anti-kamnia Tablets, and the results will be satisfactory in the highest degree. You can obtain them at all druggists in any quantity, lice worth, 25c worth or more.

SICK-HEADACHES Sick-headache, the most miserable of all sicknesses, loses its terrors when A-K Tablets are taken. When you feel an attack coming on, take two tablets, and in many cases, the attack will be warded off. During an attack take one A-K Tablet every two hours. The rest and comfort which follow, can be obtained in no other way
